After leading his team to Olympic victory in Beijing, the 21 year old Argentinean soccer star, Leo Messi, has lent his name to the first in a series of licensed mobile football titles.

This game was apparently created using authentic motion capture data following a live session with Messi to record his best moves for inclusion in the game. Players will be taking control of Leo's character and his team as they pursue a league championship in this first. Special tricks exclusive to Leo Messi are featured in 2D and 3D graphics, with a high degree of intelligence supposedly built-in to support the opposing teams.

"The achievement Leo Messi had in the Olympics casts a bigger spotlight on Messi as a highly valuable player and is more than fitting for the launch of Leo Messi-GOAL! We are delighted to contribute to his success with the first instalment of this lively series of Leo Messi-GOAL!," said Eberhard Schoneburg, CEO of Artificial Life.

Available now from www.botme.com - Artificial Life's m-commerce portal - the game will also be available soon on-deck and off-deck via operators and resellers around the world.
