In the article the author writes:

"As a full service mobile phone application software provider, Artificial Life is in the development and provision of broadband mobile entertainment, games, mobile television, mobile applications and mobile technology. ... The company's core business is to provide mobile entertainment products, games and technologies for third and fourth generation (3G and 4G) telecommunications devices and mobile phones. Most products are based on the company's ALife-SmartEngine technology and SmartEngine Mobile Platform (SEMP), which is a server side middle ware used to develop and deploy mobile applications."

The popularity of mobile phone application software is thriving:

"Following the proliferation of multimedia-enabled mobile and personal devices, which paved the way for downloading, playback and streaming of movies, games, news, music/ring-tones and wallpaper/pictures, the entertainment media industry is experimenting rapidly with business models and advanced technologies to get revenue-generating content to the consumer. One report noted that the entertainment and media industry in Hollywood has taken the plunge into the mobile content marketplace."
