Artificial Life, Inc. today signed a licensing agreement with Borussia Dortmund, the famous German soccer club, to produce a soccer game for mobile devices featuring the current team.

Borussia Dortmund (also known as BVB) is a German soccer club based in Dortmund, North Rhine-Westphalia, and is one of the most successful clubs in German soccer.

The club has won six German soccer championships and two DFB Pokal victories. The UEFA Cup Winners' Cup that Borussia won in 1966 made it the first German team ever to win a European title. BVB's most successful year was in 1997 when it won the FIFA Club World Cup and was crowned UEFA Champions for the second time.

Borussia Dortmund currently has the largest average attendance in all of Germany and one of the largest in Europe attracting on average over 80,000 fans per game. Stars playing for the team include: Sebastian Kehl, Florian Krings, Kuba, Dedê, Alexander Frei, Marc Ziegler, Tinga and Nelson Valdez. Jürgen Klopp is the head coach for the team, as well as one of the most famous and popular coaches in the league. The mobile soccer game will feature the likenesses of all current team members along with statistical team highlights - contributing to a genuine soccer experience for Borussia Dortmund fans.

The game is tentatively scheduled for release in the third quarter of 2009, around the start of the new 09/10 soccer season, pending for approval.

"Borussia Dortmund is proud to cooperate with Artificial Life, an experienced partner in the growing mobile market. With its innovative and high quality products, Artificial Life meets the demand of the mobile market," explained Matthias Zerber, CEO Merchandising of BVB.

"Borussia Dortmund is a very successful soccer club in Germany with a huge loyal fan base spanning many generations. It's an honor to work with Borussia to offer an exclusive and high quality soccer experience on mobile to their fans," said Eberhard Schoneburg, Artificial Life's Chief Executive Officer.
